

February 25th Bipartisan Health Care Summit Bloggers to Watch

In the days leading up to President Obama's Bipartisan Health Care Summit, there will be an influx of news on the event and the fate of national health care reform. Watch these blogs before and during the debate to get up-to-the-minute commentary from national health policy experts to help inform your analysis of what is really going on. As always, Community Catalyst will also be blogging about national reform at Health Policy Hub.

Ezra Klein

Voices – The Washington Post

<http://voices.washingtonpost.com/ezra-klein/>

The scoop from key players and consumers alike, with the perspective of a policy expert

Igor Volsky

The Wonk Room – Think Progress

<http://wonkroom.thinkprogress.org/>

This sometimes angry liberal gets into the policy nitty-gritty

Jonathan Cohn

The Treatment – The New Republic

<http://www.tnr.com/blogs/the-treatment>

A strong advocate for reform who weighs all the options

David Herszenhorn

Prescriptions – The New York Times

<http://prescriptions.blogs.nytimes.com/>

A timely blog that has more details than bias

Sarah Kliff

The Gaggle – Newsweek

<http://blog.newsweek.com/blogs/thegaggle/default.aspx>

Health care reform made easy for consumers

Health Affairs blog

<http://healthaffairs.org/blog/>

The journal's blog has varying perspectives on a wide range of health policy topics

Politico Pulse

<http://www.politico.com/politicopulse/>

A round-up of all the important issues to watch as they unfold